

My Legend

Long, long ago before the world was created there was nothing, there was only chorus. But a little while later the choruses starting uniting and made a huge circle. Then later still one giant baby was born in the circle. The giant baby grew so fast and finally became so big that the giant started kicking the circle, trying to get out. Finally, the giant smashed the circle and got out from that circle, and also all of the choruses got out of the circle. Some choruses spilt into the sky and some choruses spilt into the ground, so the giant was in the middle of the sky and ground. Then the choruses started uniting again and the giant was scared because if the choruses kept uniting he would be confined again and he didn't want that. So, he used his hands to hold the sky choruses up and his feet to keep the ground choruses down. All this time the giant kept growing very fast. Finally, thousands of year later the sky and ground split far away from each other. The giant was so tired because he had kept the sky and ground apart for a thousand years. He lay down on the ground and his body became lots of different things. His eyes became the sun and moon, his breath became air, his hair became many creatures, his tears became the sea and water, and his skin became trees and plants.
